No alcohol, arrests make regatta 'neat'

By Nora Bertley

A dry regatta is a better regatta, according to Richard Archer, originator of the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta.

No arrests were made at this year's Great Cardboard Boat Regatta and Archer said it was the best one he's seen in the last five years.

Robert Harris, director of SIU-C Security Police, said "We didn't make any arrests at all. It was the neatest thing." A few people were stopped with beer, but were just made to get rid of it, he said.

In past, alcohol usage has caused many problems, Archer, an assistant professor of design, said.

"The high schoolers were complaining that some SIU-C students were offering them beer," Archer said. "There were fights and usually by the time we got to the middle of the race, people wouldn't go into the water with their boats because they are too intoxicated."

Archer said he likes the regatta better separated from Springfest. "They are two totally different events," he said.

Contestants in a class I match at the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta Saturday, prepare to launch their vessels. Students from Marion High School came out the big winners, taking first place in class I and the high school match and placing second in the class III match.

Attendance at this year's regatta was about 15,000 compared to last year's 20,000 to 25,000, Archer said.

Some of the participants and bystanders felt that the decrease in the amount of people compared to last year could be partly due to the separation of the regatta from Springfest. Although for some, the alcohol ban may have affected their reasons for attending.

Scott Abbott, junior in product design, said he disagrees with the ban and his boat the "Party Barge," complete with a bar, conveyed that feeling.

Drinking should be allowed because it can be controlled, Abbott said. "There are people available to provide safety

A "Chevy S-10 Pick-up," a "Batmobile" and an "Island" were just a few of the boats setting sail in the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta that drew "oohs and ahhs" from the crowd.

This year 166 boats varied in size, shape and color.

Richard Archer, originator of the regatta and an assistant professor of design, said: "This year there were more unique boats than usual."

Entrants included SIU-C students who designed boats as part of a final project in Archer's design class, students from area high schools and Southern Illinois residents.

Contestants were required to propel their boats around a 200-yard triangular-shaped course. The boats are divided into three classes.

Class I boats are propelled by canoe paddles, oars or kayak paddles.

Biologist hopes for return of falcon to Shawnee

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

When American bald eagles nested for the first time in Southern Illinois last year, it was a cause for celebration and also extreme caution.

The eagles nested on private land near the Ohio River — about 70 feet from the Shawnee National Forest, Mike Spanel, forest wildlife biologist for the U.S. Forest Service, said.

Forest Service officials arranged an agreement with the landowner to try to encourage the eagles to successfully nest, but eventually the eagles abandoned their nest, Spanel said.

"We believe it was caused by human disturbance," Spanel said. "There is a lot of boating and fishing going on in the area."

Spanel would not give the exact location of the nesting site, because he hopes the eagles will return and he wants to prevent further human molestation.

The bald eagle is one of three animals in the Shawnee National Forest that appear on the federal list of endangered species, Spanel said. The other two are the gray bat and the Indiana bat.

Spanel also said the Shawnee has potential habitats for two other federally endangered species; the least tern and the peregrine falcon. The falcon can reach speeds of 70 mph when diving for prey, making it the fastest bird in the world.

"The habitats exist for the peregrine falcon and the least tern," Spanel said, "but, historically, it's been so long since they've been there, I don't think they would come back."

Spanel said the reasons species, such as the peregrine falcon, will not return include poaching, threats by predatory animals and human intervention, such as boating and fishing.

But the major problem in the Shawnee, Spanel said, is free-running dogs.

Spanel said a contest was held recently in the southern region of Pope County, where hundreds of dogs were allowed to run freely through the woods.

The contests are held by hunters and farmers as a

Students in China continue pro-democracy riots

BEIJING (UPI) — More than 2,000 students marched at a Beijing college Sunday and new wall posters appeared on other campuses to denounce as a sham the government's first talks with students entering their third week of pro-democracy protests.

The new posters on Beijing campuses warned the students would demonstrate again on Thursday, the 70th anniversary of the 1919 May 4th movement, a nationalistic student-led movement that demanded greater democracy for China.

"The battle is still ahead," said one of the wall posters, a traditional means of public expression in China.

"Regardless of developments in the next few days, there will certainly be big activity on May 4," said a 22-year-old Beijing University junior, Xi Chengxin.

The actions indicated persistent ferment at the capital's universities, from which students have led protests for greater political freedom since April 17 that have spread to half a dozen cities and triggered rioting in two provincial capitals.

Marches in Beijing last week were the biggest anti-government demonstrations since the founding of communist China in 1949 as hundreds of thousands of workers joined students on the streets to protest against political repression.

Two senior government officials, in a concession to the students after the largest protest last Thursday, met for several hours Saturday with student representatives.

But many students came away criticizing the meeting as fruitless, saying the officials had not substantively addressed their concerns and spent much of the time advising the students to end a week-old boycott of classes.

U.S. military beginning to fight war on drugs

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — The U.S. military, after years of just saying no, is slowly stepping up its involvement in the war on drugs.

Sophisticated radar planes have tracked smugglers coming into the United States, and National Guard F-16s recently have chased and helped capture planes suspected of carrying drugs.

Since April, National Guard volunteers in Texas have been searching tractor trailers coming across the border from Mexico and ships docking in Houston.

The National Guard in California has piloted Customs agents looking for smuggling boats and clandestine airports.

The news is not all good, however, and one of the military's most recent forays into the drug war ended with U.S. Customs causing a diplomatic tiff with Canada.

And the Pentagon's proposed budget for fiscal 1990, which begins Oct. 1, doesn't include any money for the war on drugs, an omission that probably will be corrected by Congress.

Laws banning the military from acting like police officers have created special problems. For example, the Pentagon says dogs trained to sniff out drugs can be loaned to police agencies, but not their military handlers.

"It still is a question of attitudes rather than hard results right now, but the military finally seems excited about it," said a top congressional aide who has been pushing the Pentagon into the war on drugs.

"For years the Pentagon said they could not chase a Piper Cub with an F-16. Now they have done it three times this year," the staffer said.

In one case, F-16s chased a small plane until it crashed into the ocean near Florida.

Atlantis repair crew hurries to ready for Friday launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Technicians swarmed over the grounded shuttle Atlantis Sunday to replace a damaged fuel line and a suspect pump in an around-the-clock bid to ready the ship for a second launch try, possibly as early as Friday. Atlantis and its five-member crew were grounded last Friday by a combination of frustrating technical glitches just 31 seconds before the ship's giant boosters were to have ignited to kick off the year's second shuttle flight, a showcase mission to launch a science probe to Venus.

Man with gun kills 1, injures 13 in England

LONDON (UPI) — A 22-year-old man armed with a shotgun went on a shooting rampage in a seaside resort Sunday, killing one man and injuring 13 other people, police said. The gunman, dressed in black with a hunting knife thrust into his belt, was arrested 15 minutes after he opened fire at random in Monkseaton, 280 miles northwest of London, Northumberland Police spokeswoman Gillian Radcliffe said.

Both sides in Lebanon violate cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Christian army troops battled Syrian-backed Moslem militiamen, and shells and rockets crashed around Christian harbors Sunday in defiance of an Arab League-mediated cease-fire. Meanwhile, the Christian military leader, Gen. Michel Aoun, said he favors the deployment of international troops in Lebanon, and Syria said it viewed no solution except "ousting" the general.

Cannon misfired on Iowa before explosion

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — A 16-inch cannon in the USS Iowa's Turret 1 misfired during the April 19 drill in which a fiery blast killed 47 sailors in Turret 2 aboard the battleship, a report said Sunday. Crewmen in Turret 1 couldn't get one of their fully loaded cannons to fire during the drill on the ship off Puerto Rico.

Alaska beaches slowly being steam-cleaned

VALDEZ, Alaska (UPI) — Shoreline assault teams falling dangerously behind in the battle to save harbor seal rookeries turned Sunday to hot-water flushing and steam — which blasts rocks clean but kills everything in its path. "What you're essentially doing is sterilizing the beach," said Alaska's on-the-scene coordinator. "Organisms up to a foot deep in the sand and gravel are boiled to death."

Ethnic rioting continues in Senegal, 14 killed

DAKAR, Senegal (UPI) — Soldiers fired tear gas Sunday during a third day of anti-Mauritanian rioting blamed for several deaths as French transport planes flew thousands of Mauritanian and Senegalese refugees to their homelands. Witnesses said at least 14 people were killed Friday and other sources put the death toll as high as 40 in the riots, sparked by reports that hundreds of Senegalese were hacked or beaten to death in neighboring Mauritania.

Pope calls for environmental protection

ANTANANARIVO, Madagascar (UPI) — Pope John Paul II issued an urgent appeal Sunday for protection of the environment from "selfish" abuse and called for the international community to coordinate the effort. In an address to the Madagascar diplomatic corps, John Paul said protecting forests, rolling back deserts, containing hazardous wastes and saving the atmosphere can only be done through general cooperation.

Marion Penitentiary targeted by human rights protesters

By Theresa Livingston
and Richard Nunez
Staff Writers

About 250 people from nine cities and seven college campuses throughout the Midwest converged in Carbondale to protest what they view as human rights violations at Marion Penitentiary.

"We have people here who have been traveling twelve hours to get here. They've spent their own money and time because they care about justice in this country," Steve Whitman, of Chicago, said.

The demonstrators gathered at the University's free forum area in the early morning to kick off a day-long protest of inhumane conditions at the penitentiary.

The Marion Penitentiary is the only U.S. prison to be condemned by the human rights group, Amnesty International.

Built in 1963, Marion penitentiary went through reevaluation in the late 1970s as part of a new federal system, which assigned the institution a Level 6 rating on a 1 to 6 scale. The maximum security level earned it the nickname, "the new Alcatraz."

The new designation meant Marion would become the nation's main depository for inmates with serious disciplinary problems.

Nancy Kurshan, of the Committee to End the Marion Lockdown, described the prison as a "dungeon," where prisoners are treated "like animals in a zoo."

Kurshan said prison officials chained prisoners naked and spread-eagled to their bunks, subjecting prisoners to rectal probes and supplying prisoners with contaminated water from Crab Orchard Lake.

Kandy Davis, public relations officer for the penitentiary, said while strict security measures are enforced at the institution, he denied allegations of inhumane treatment of prisoners.

"The institution as a whole is seen as harsh, but it allows other operations to function more smoothly. A lot of people's lives are saved by this place," he said.

Davis said in extreme conditions, prisoners are sometimes confined to their bunks by leather straps, but are not naked or chained down. He said the prisoners are checked every half hour and are allowed bathroom breaks.

Davis said the occasional rectal searches conducted on the prisoners for contraband materials are necessary.

"In the rectal and nasal cavities, you'll find hacksaw blades, handcuff keys, razor blades and drugs," he said.

Davis also said the penitentiary's water supply meets government standards and is safe for human consumption.

"It (the water) is tested on a weekly basis. I drink it, the staff that lives on the ground drinks it, so obviously, we think it's safe," he said.

Kurshan also called for an end to restricted visitations. A prisoner's only contact to the outside world is through a plexiglass shield, Kurshan said.

"Prisoners are allowed no human contact," Kurshan said. "The kind of human contact that heals the soul."

The demonstrators left the free forum area about 10 a.m. and began the half-mile walk through campus and downtown Carbondale to protest in front of the Federal Building on 250 W. Cherry St.

Demonstrators chanted "Marion lockdown, we say, No Control Units have got to go," and "Bureau of Prisons, FBI, U.S. justice is a lie."

Accompanied by a police escort, the marchers waved flags, banners and pamphlets as they filed down Walnut Street toward the Carbondale Post Office.

Julie Jones of Davenport, Iowa, said she and four friends drove all night to reach the Carbondale protest as "a matter of principle."

"We have to oppose injustices wherever we find them. That's the only way we can survive," she said.

Poshard criticizes Bush's S&L bailout program

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Illinois taxpayers would have to pay $232 per person to support President George Bush's savings and loan bailout plan, U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard said.

Poshard, D-Carterville, at a press conference Friday at the Herrin City Hall said that he and other legislators oppose Bush's plan. He suggested calling a halt to the "steamroller bill" until more realistic and affordable plans can be considered.

Bush's plan, which has already been passed by the Senate, would sell $50 billion in bonds to finance the savings and loan bailout.

More than 800 savings and loan institutions in the United States have gone bankrupt and more than two-thirds of the losses come from the state of Texas.

According to administrators, taxpayers will pay an estimated $100 million, Poshard said.

However, Poshard said the actual cost is closer to $300 million. The money would be "well hidden from the taxpayers," he said.

"This plan would swell the federal deficit, but not be included in the federal budget," Poshard said. "We're rushing into a financial black hole on this savings and loan rescue."

The money will be on an "off-budget" commission, Poshard said. "Off-budget" financing entails committing federal funds to the bankrupt businesses, but the funds will not be included in the nation's annual budget.

"The Bush plan is economic suicide," Poshard said. "Floating these bonds over a long period of time will give our kids and grandkids a debt they'll never forgive us for."

Poshard said his main concern over the bailout plan was its discrimination against whole regions of the country.

The bailout takes equally from taxpayers across the country, but the vast majority of funds go to the Southwest.

Although Texas residents pay no income or corporate taxes, they will receive about 65 percent of the bailout funds, Poshard said. Other states to file several savings and loan bankruptcies include Arkansas, New Mexico, Louisiana and Arizona.

Illinois was one of the states with the fewest savings and loan losses, Poshard said.

"The states should make up for their own losses," Poshard said.

The current bailout plans ignore the economic concept of risk-taking, he said.

Savings and loans took great financial risks in search of huge profits; therefore, they should not ask for support from the federal government, he said.

Poshard admits stopping the bill will be difficult. The speaker of the House and the chairman of the House banking committee are both from Texas.

Poshard hopes he and his colleagues can amend the bill.

Buildings are waste without equipment

NO NEW SCIENCE buildings. That is our response to the governor's so called initiatives for science and technology for Illinois.

Gov. James R. Thompson announced Wednesday that a $17 million biological science building a $43 million addition to the Physical Plant and a $2 million Wheeler Hall renovation are planned for SIU-C pending legislative approval of the projects and a controversial tobacco tax that would raise revenues for these projects.

A New biological science building sounds great. University President John C. Guyon said the new building would create a "ripple effect" on other scholastic departments by relieving the cramped spaces of biochemists, chemists and physicists in Neckers, Life Science II and the Technology Building.

But the University's science departments are suffering from underpaid faculty, outdated equipment and an ailing science library far more than they are suffering from a lack of space.

WHILE A STRONGER case can be made for Physical Plant additions, which University officials said is now operating at maximum potential, science labs generally are overcrowded and sometimes canceled because of a lack of teaching assistants and money for basic equipment. Students often are forced to perform their laboratory experiments in overcrowded labs while empty ones lay unused next door because equipment must be shared or teaching assistants are not available, or both.

The fact that Thompson is talking about spending the money that would be raised from a tobacco tax increase on flashy items like new buildings for this campus, the University of Illinois-Urbana and Northern Illinois University prove that the proposed tax is no more than a Band-Aid for what ails Illinois' public universities.

THE CURE FOR these universities is a substantial infusion of cash that would be raised by a modest tax increase.

Science labs need equipment for undergraduate students comparable with that in the work place; in too many science labs the equipment is often antiquated, sometimes decades out of date.

While a new biological science building may take some stress off overcrowding in certain areas, the money would be better spent for basic university needs.

But since these basic needs are less glamorous than a shiny new building that the governor can point to with an inflated chest, basic needs have come in second place.

Opinions from elsewhere

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

By refusing to move off his initial position on raising the minimum wage, President Bush has contradicted his earlier promises of an accommodating, compromising approach to relations with Congress. His opponents on the issue have already lowered their target for the increased minimum wage and have agreed to the president's plan for a sub-minimum training wage for new workers. Mr. Bush should be equally willing to meet the other side halfway.

As things stand, a bill passed by the House and supported in the Senate by key boosters of a higher minimum wage would raise the hourly rate from the current $3.35 an hour to $4.55 in three yearly steps. The House bill also includes a sub-minimum wage to be paid to new workers for their first 90 days on their first job only. A Senate proposal lets the sub-minimum be paid to workers jobs they hold during that period. In each case, the sub-minimum wage would end in October 1992.

Those provisions have changed from initial proposals for a minimum wage of $4.65 an hour, with no training wage at all. By contrast, Mr. Bush has proposed increasing the minimum to $4.25 an hour by 1992 and allowing a sub-minimum wage for all new workers in their first six months. That's where he started, and that's where he remains. "We fired our best shot and last shot and only shot first," he told reporters. "I have no intention of budging one inch on this. I have too much at stake."

He has a lot less at stake than the nation's 5 million minimum-wage workers — a wage that has not risen since 1981. For their sake, the president should be more flexible, so that people who are willing to work can earn a wage worthy of their labor.

Football is window to the public; effort should promote University

My first reaction to the loyal opposition was to lash out and in doing so, add fuel to the fire. But as more was written about the subject of football at SIU I realized we had enough negative press.

Whether you like it or not, athletics is the window to a university for the majority of the general public. Granted that's not what you should judge a university by, but it quite often is the only contact most people have.

For some reason we have a difficult time focusing on positive events. Just days after the basketball team came within three points of winning the MVC tournament, we have found a negative issue to dominate the sports page.

I realize each and every faculty and staff member has felt the crunch of a diminished cash flow, but instead of attacking each other's department giving the impression of a university in decline, why not work together to promote a positive image of an institution on the move. Looking forward to the 21st century.

The young men and women who attend SIU need alternatives when it comes to their leisure time. Rock concerts and carnivals are nice, but the option of a sporting event is important too.

I think most parents would appreciate their young person having that option. The student who attends athletic events and gets involved in supporting the teams will have a much closer attachment to their university.

Just one note on cost: When you add up the expenses of the football program, consider where the scholarship money is spent.

I urge those of you involved in decision making, letter writing and editorials to think positive and work on answers that build up SIU. — William R. Crippen, Carbondale.

Rec Center should be an alternative

I think that the Student Recreation Center should remain open until 10 p.m. or even later. Mike Dunn, the director of the Rec Center, has stated that such an extension of hours is not feasible, that students will not use the Rec Center during these hours if it were to remain open.

If such is the case, then why is it that every Friday or Saturday that I've been in the Rec Center at 8 p.m. (closing time), the staff needs about 30 minutes to kick all of the students out of the place.

Inadequate student usage during these hours is a lame excuse that just won't wash.

Many people have complained about this school's image as a party school. Recently, some school administrators have seriously begun to consider steps to change this image.

One thing that they might wish to keep in mind as they approach this task is that students quite often don't perceive many (or any) alternatives to going to the strip or partying in general.

When facilities such as the Rec Center close at 8 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, this reduces even further the viable alternatives to getting trashed.

And if the choice in the minds of most students is between sipping some suds or sitting at home and watching Zamfir (master of the hauntingly beautiful pan flute) commercials on a Friday or Saturday night, I wonder which one they will choose. — Scott Parker, graduate student, clinical psychology.

Crossword players need answers

I'm really getting fed up with the cavalier attitude that seems to prevail over there at the DE regarding the crossword puzzle of the day. Specifically, I have been previously dismayed to see that the clues for the puzzle which were printed did not match the puzzle matrix.

This has happened not once, but twice this semester! And then in the April 26 DE I was appalled to see that the very same puzzle (with correct clues) from the previous day's DE was reprinted, depriving me of an integral part of my early morning ritual.

Others have their four or five cup coffee fix in the morning in order to shake off the cobwebs and face the day as humanly as possible. We crossword players need our fix too.

Crossword junkies unite! The lax attitude concerning crosswords at the DE must stop now. — Steven P. Cercy, graduate student, clinical psychology.

Spackman Triathlon deserved some press

At first I was upset, but then I realized which newspaper I was reading (the DE). What had upset me was the lack of coverage of the Doc Spackman Memorial Triathlon.

For those of you who weren't there, it was the healthier side of Springfest. This lack of coverage pointed out that SIU must really want the party image.

It seems to me that if SIU was compared to other major universities, the amount of partying going on would not be that different, but instead the amount of press coverage and discussion about partying would be where SIU stands out.

I feel that if SIU was truly sincere about losing this party image they could start by putting the spotlight on the other thousands of activities that take place at this university, and letting the hoopla about partying quietly fade into the past. — Christopher Midden, graduate student, plant and soil science.

means of parading hunting dogs and allowing an opportunity for a dog to display its talents.

During the run, Spanel said, dogs usually kill many grounded birds and other species of wildlife, such as deer.

The 250,000-acre Shawnee National Forest houses 451 species of mammals, birds, fish and amphibians, Spanel said. The list ranges from the rare Swainson's warbler and Mississippi kite to the abundant white-tailed deer and wild turkey.

Of the 451 species in the Shawnees, 23 are considered "sensitive," which means forest officials are trying to keep them off the federal listing of endangered species, Spanel said.

"The likelihood of them appearing on the federal list is high," Spanel said.

Species that are considered sensitive include the Spring Cave fish, the Swainson's warbler, broad banded water snake, and the Mead's milkweed.

The technique is called prescribed burning, which reduces woody undergrowth, restores grassy plants and provides a "vigorous, new" environment not only for the Mead's milkweed, Spanel said, but also for other forms of wildlife.

OFFICIALS ALSO employ a farming technique called discing and seeding, which Spanel described as much like a farmer plowing and seeding his field.

Forest officials also disc and seed about 3,500 acres of wildlife openings, Spanel said. Officials disc and seed about 300 acres a year and provide such wildlife staples as clover, millet and milo.

In cases such as severe drought, officials also maintain 1,100 waterholes as a backup water supply for wildlife. Spanel described the waterholes as a "basin" or "bathtub" in the woods.

"There is at least one water hole for every 100 acres," Spanel said. "We maintain them so an animal doesn't have to traverse so far to find water."

THE SHAWNEE is one of 14 forests in Region 9, or the Eastern region, which includes such states as Indiana, Missouri, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Spanel said the Shawnee is second or third in terms of budgeting in the region.

"I'd say we're right up there in the region," Spanel said. "The Shawnee is a rapidly growing forest with developing opportunities."

Of these opportunities, Spanel said the Shawnee has the potential to become the nation's leader in two areas of forest management; water fowl hunting and natural area management.

Natural area management encourages the development of natural plant communities, such as early, glade-type grass, and attempts to restore the communities to a prehistoric state, Spanel said.

OFFICIALS ARE using the technique in more than 6,000 areas in the Shawnee, comprising more than 11,000 acres, Spanel said. The sites include areas such as Bell Smith Springs in Harrisburg, Larue Pine Hills in Jonesboro and Little Grand Canyon near Murphysboro.

Spanel said water fowl hunting opportunities in the Shawnee are "premier," primarily in Oak Wood Bottoms west of Alto Pass, where about 340,000 acres have been set aside for the hunting of ducks and geese.

Spanel said $420,000 have been set aside for a feasibility study to expand the area more than 700 additional acres. Spanel said the project is expected to be completed within five years.

measures for those who might go overboard," he said.

Rick Johnson, junior in anthropology, said: "I think it's (the regatta) great. But, I think that later in the day I would enjoy a beer and it's too bad that's not possible."

But Amy Mirocha, sophomore in visual communication, said the events are better separated. "I'm kind of glad they separated the regatta from Springfest. People aren't getting out of hand and ruining your boat."

Tim Phelps, a Carbondale Community High School student and a race participant, said, "I like the idea of trying to get everyone in one piece, but I liked having somewhere else to go after racing."

Aldon Addington, a technical inspector for the regatta and a faculty member of the School of Art and Design, said he favors the separation.

"We're going back to what it used to be, with grade schools, families, high schools and boy scouts involved," Addington said.

University President John C. Guyon, who fired the starting pistol for several races, said he thought the event was going beautifully. "The crowd size is comparable to other years," he said. "I think we're in great shape."

Bush leads bicentennial tribute to 1st president

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Bush, marking his 100th full day in office Sunday by leading a bicentennial tribute to George Washington's first day on the job, celebrated "the pulse of history" that led to the birth of a nation.

In a day that drew inevitable comparisons between the two U.S. presidents named "George," Bush flew to New York aboard Air Force One in less than an hour for the ceremony marking Washington's inaugural address 200 years ago.

It took Washington, traveling by horse-drawn coach, more than a week to travel about the same distance to New York from Mount Vernon, Va., in the outskirts of what is now that nation's capital.

Asked by reporters aboard the presidential jet who his favorite president was, Bush said: "I'll have to go with George today. How are you going to go against George on a day like this?"

The pageantry of the day, with the distinctly modern touch of a presidential motorcade and thousands of policemen lining the streets of New York to ensure security, was highlighted by Bush's speech from the 149-year-old Federal Hall.

"It was Washington's vision, his balance, his integrity, that made the presidency possible," Bush said from the marble steps of Federal Hall where Washington delivered the nation's first inaugural address.

The original Federal Hall, which was razed in 1812, served as the home of the nation's first Congress for two years.

"Two centuries ago, standing here, a man took an oath before a new nation and the eyes of God," Bush said in his speech. "Everyone here today can still feel the pulse of history, the charge and power of that great moment, in the genesis of his nation."

"George Washington defined

"George Washington defined and shaped this office. The presidency, then as now — in oath and in office — derives from the strength and the will of the people."

—President George Bush and shaped this office," the 41st president said. "The presidency, then as now — in oath and in office — derives from the strength and the will of the people."

Washington was sworn in on a second floor balcony of Federal Hall. Facing the Senate Chamber, his hand on a Bible, he promised to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution" of a then infant and struggling democracy.

At the time, Washington was a 57-year-old retired general and a veteran of the Revolutionary War and the Constitutional Convention of 1787. He reluctantly agreed to leave his Virginia farm and go to New York to once again lead his country.

Like Washington, Bush also is a war veteran, having served as a combat pilot in World War II. Both men came from wealthy families and both were tall and lean. But while Washington reluctantly accepted the presidency — he was tired of battling with bureaucrats — Bush actively campaigned for the job.

In his speech, delivered as the sun poked through steel grey skies, Bush read from an account of the first inauguration: "This great Man was agitated and embarrassed, more than ever he was by the leveled cannon or pointed musket."

Said Bush, "But who wouldn't have felt some trepidation, undertaking a task, which had never been tried in the world's history." "Or that day," Bush said, "Washington spoke of his 'conflicts of emotions.' He admitted his 'anxieties and deficiencies,' as honest men will."

Bush's speech was punctuated by protests from

"Two centuries ago, standing here, a man took an oath before a new nation and the eyes of God. It was Washington's vision, his balance, his integrity, that made the presidency possible."

demonstrators chanting: "One hundred days and nothing done. What about AIDS?" Police surrounded the half-dozen protesters standing beneath the bullet-proof booth protecting Bush. Following the speech, Bush led a motorcade from Federal Hall, up Broadway and past thousands of people three and four deep lining the streets.

Prior to his remarks, Bush, first lady Barbara Bush and their daughter Dorothy LeBlond watched with thousands of New Yorkers, a re-inactment of Washington's swearing-in.

Upon arrival in New York, the Bushes attended services at St. Paul's Chapel, a 16th Century stone church on what it is now lower Broadway. Washington went to the same church to pray on April 30, 1789, the day he became president.

Bush sat through the half-hour service, which ended with the singing of "America," in George Washington's box and listened to a brief sermon praising the United States that was delivered by fellow Yale alumnus, the Rev. Cannon Lloyd.

In helping dedicate a museum of American Constitutional Government at Federal Hall, Bush said, "As we dedicate a museum... let us together re-dedicate ourselves to the principles to which Washington gave voice 200 years ago."

'Pet Sematary' rivoting, but screenwriting lacking

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

He should have left it as a book.

Stephen King unquestionably is a master of macabre. His books have kept even the most disciplined readers up long past their bedtime. His screenwriting abilities, on the other hand, lack the horror his books possess.

For those who haven't read the book, "Pet Sematary" won't be disappointing as a movie. An hour and 50 minutes of gore mixed with faint traces of King's recipe for unforgettable scare is enough to keep most moviegoers on edge.

The plot remains consistent in both versions. The Creed family, complete with son, daughter and happily married parents, moves to a rural area somewhere in — can you guess? — Maine.

Disaster strikes when the young son is killed on a highway in front of the family's rambling house. The highway usually is reserved for killing pets.

The father is so grief-stricken that he decides to rebury his son in an ancient Indian burial ground, a hallowed ground that reincarnates its victims into horrible zombie-like creatures. And a zombie-like toddler is a sight to behold.

Some interesting actors used in this adaptation include Fred Gwynne, better known as Herman Munster from "The Munsters," and King himself. Gwynne portrays the next door neighbor who informs Mr. Creed of the Indian burial ground. This disclosure comes back to haunt the old man.

King, surprisingly enough, portrays a priest. His single acting spell, lacking as much polish as his scripting ability, included a minimum number of lines spoken in front of an open grave. Standing with a Bible in hand and not a hair out of place, King is a shocking — if not outright hilarious — sight.

The movie includes scenes completely foreign to the book. Missy, the Creed family's hired help, hangs herself. Victor Pascow, a ghost who leads Mr. Creed to the actual pet cemetery, hangs around as a sort of guardian angel for the Creed family.

Director Mary Lambert uses carnage overkill to illustrate horror, with little or no space left for suspense.

The book leaves perception of horror up to the reader. Somehow, a truly vicious 2-year-old is more believable on paper than on screen.

The movie's ending is anti-climactic; the book leaves the ending to the imagination. Not convinced?

Spend the $4.25 on a paperback copy and the hour and 50 minutes reading the first 10 chapters. Your mind will thank you.

Jackie O. biography gives details of later years

NEW YORK (UPI) — As Jackie Onassis nears her 60th birthday, she has settled into a comfortable relationship with a married millionaire and cut her work week in half, an unauthorized biography of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis reports.

"A Woman Named Jackie" by C. David Heymann, scheduled for publication Monday by Lyle Stuart, pictures the former First Lady as a woman who has suffered and survived, still youthful as she faces her senior citizen years with the security that an eight-digit fortune can provide.

According to Heymann,

Onassis had a modified face lift around the eyes 10 years ago, making her look 35 when she was 50. What pleases her most "was the knowledge that not a single reporter, photographer or gossip columnist had uncovered her little secret," he reports.

New revelations about President John F. Kennedy's womanizing during his marriage to Onassis, in a pre-publication serialization of Heymann's book by the weekly Star, has whetted the public's appetite for the book. The publisher has increased the original press run of 50,000 copies to 300,000.

"A Woman Named Jackie" may be more about Jack than Jackie, who was able to maintain considerable privacy in her limelight White House years and even more during the years of her marriage to Greek shipping tycoon Aristotle Onassis.

The book claims that the privacy Onassis' $1 billion fortune could provide was second only to financial security as the reason Mrs. Kennedy became Mrs. Onassis in 1968.

That security eventually added up to $42 million when Onassis died five years later after setting divorce proceedings in motion — a $26 million dollar "payoff" to her thoroughly disliked step-mother by Christina Onassis plus $5 million in jewels and other gifts from Onassis.

Jackie Onassis' fortune probably has been greatly increased through her long friendship with Maurice Tempelman, a millionaire international diamond merchant exactly her own age. He is a Belgian Jew whose family fled to the United States in 1940.

Tempelman and his wife, Lily, were frequent guests at the White House during the Kennedy administration. He has become Onassis' financial adviser, so intimately involved in her affairs as public escort and private companion that he often stays several nights a week in Onassis' apartment.

Ceremony highlights top officers

The 9th Annual Army ROTC Awards Ceremony recognized individuals and organizations within the Army ROTC program.

The Ranger Company, Pershing Rifles and AUSA Awards Ceremony received certificates of appreciation, and 2nd Lt. Elke L. Daniel and Amir K. Saery were among the individuals recognized in the ceremony.

Daniel and Saery were named Distinguished Military Graduates for excellence in scholastic and military activities.

Other winners included Ronald D. Aut for the President's Sabre award, Daniel T. Traylor for the Society of the War of 1812, Joanne M. Williams for the Daughters of the American Revolution and Wayne H. White for the College of Technical Careers Award.

The awards were distributed Thursday in the Law School Auditorium before an audience of 60 people.

Capt. Kenneth M. King, assistant professor of military science, said the awards ceremony recognizes military excellence in students who have chosen service to their country.

King said most of the awards were presented by former servicemen. He said it does their hearts good to see young students who may be the future leaders of the military.

"The award winners remind (the former servicemen) of themselves when they were young," King said.

Publisher regrets sending letter to NBC's Brokaw

DETROIT (UPI) — The publisher of the Football News and Basketball Weekly said Sunday he regrets sending to NBC-TV a letter that criticized a network news special on black athletes and suggested they are inferior to white athletes.

"I think I should have picked up the phone" instead, said Roger Stanton, publisher of the two Detroit-based sports periodicals.

NBC ran a one-hour news special last Tuesday called "Black Athletes: Fact and Fiction" and a live, 45-minute panel discussion about the show.

Stanton, 60, sent a letter last Wednesday to NBC News anchor Tom Brokaw criticizing the special for avoiding the "important points" that black athletes "lack discipline," "have greater emotional swings than the white athlete" and "aren't willing to pay the price" to excel in other professions.

Stanton said he wrote the letter because NBC asked for reaction to the program.

"His (Brokaw's) program invited commentary," Stanton said. "I think I should have picked up the phone.

"Tom Brokaw was doing a very delicate thing. ... As far as I'm concerned, I just gave him some private observations about black athletes."

Stanton said he criticized the program for avoiding what he called "the issues at hand," and said he doesn't consider himself or his publication racially biased.

The points in the letter to Brokaw included:

— Black athletes are "most likely to get into trouble," such as petty theft, drugs and breaking rules.

— Black Washington Redskins quarterback Doug Williams' Super Bowl victory "may have been a fluke" and "frankly speaking, the quarterback is a very intricate position and there are not very many blacks qualified to be quarterbacks."

— "I will guarantee you that if you gave 20 white college football players an IQ test and 20 black college players an IQ test that the whites would outshine the blacks every time."

Brokaw, in a statement released through his office, said: "I'm not going to dignify the letter with a reply."

Detroit civic and sports community expressed shock at Stanton's letter.

"It's so bad — where do you begin?" said Detroit Mayor Coleman Young. "It just gets worse and worse every paragraph. What you have here is a synthesis of every racist opinion that has accumulated over the centuries."

Detroit Lions coach Wayne Fontes responded to the letter, saying, "You could get this guy for slander."

Chicago loses to Cavaliers; NBA series tied at one each

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Ron Harper scored 31 points, including a team playoff record 21 in the first half, as the Cleveland Cavaliers defeated the Chicago Bulls 96-88 Sunday to even their best-of-five NBA playoff series at one victory each.

Michael Jordan scored 30 and dished out 10 assists for the Bulls, but he was charged with seven turnovers.

The series now moves to Chicago for games 3 and 4 Wednesday and Friday. The fifth game, if necessary, returns to the Richfield Coliseum next Sunday.

Harper scored 13 points in the second quarter.

Cubs knock off San Diego Padres

CHICAGO (UPI) — Curtis Wilkerson delivered a double and triple and scored twice Sunday and Scott Sanderson allowed five hits over seven innings to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 7-3 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Sanderson, 2-2, struck out four and walked one in his longest outing since September 9, 1987. After allowing two first-inning runs, Sanderson retired 18 of 19 before running into trouble in the seventh. His only walk was to Bip Roberts to open the game.

Padres starter Eric Show, 4-2, had a four-game winning streak snapped and suffered only his second loss in his last 11 starts, dating back to last year.

San Diego got two runs in the first on a sacrifice fly by Carmelo Martinez and an RBI single by Marvel Wynne. The Cubs answered with two in their half. Wilkerson led off with a double and Ryne Sandberg walked. After the runners moved up on a double steal, Andre Dawson slapped a two-run single to left.

The Cubs made it 4-2 with a pair of unearned runs in a strange second inning. Sanderson singled for his first hit since Aug. 9, 1987 and Mitch Webster snapped an 0-for-30 streak with a single. With two out, Ryne Sandberg's fly ball to left-center was dropped by Marvel Wynne after he collided with center fielder Tony Gwynn.

The Cubs added a run in the eighth on a bloop single.

Daugherty chooses five for last meet

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

A rain-shortened Illinois Spring Classic gave the women's golf team a fourth-place finish as the Salukis finished up their final regular season play before the Gateway Conference finals.

Scheduled for 54 holes, rain allowed only 18 holes both Friday and Saturday to hold the tournament to 36 holes.

Coach Diane Daugherty's team put together a 663, and were defeated for the first time this season in three outings by conference foe Illinois State, who finished second at 645.

"Illinois State had a great tournament," Daugherty said. "They were due to beat us. The third time is the charm."

Lisa Meritt again paced the Salukis, finishing ninth overall at 161. Freshman Anne Childress, who has earned a spot on SIU-C's conference squad with her spring play, scored a 168 while Lisa Johnson put together two rounds of 82 for a 164.

Joining Meritt, Childress and Johnson on the conference team will be Peggy Ellsworth and Julie Schumaker, who shot rounds of 86 and 82 as an individual this weekend.

"She is hopefully on her way back," Daugherty said of Schumaker, the defending conference champ who will be shooting fifth for the Salukis. "I feel confident going into the conference."

Winner of Drake Relays picks up 2nd consecutive title in own meet

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Drake's Kevin Little gave the home crowd something to cheer about when he became the host school's first two-time Drake Relays winner with victories in the 200-meter and 400-meter dashes.

"I'm mentally drained," Little said after completing the double. "The 200 drained me. That's the one I wanted to win, and I didn't really concentrate on the 400."

Little's time in the 200 was 20.59 seconds, only two-tenths of a second off the meet record, and he won the 400 in 46.75 seconds. Little already owns the school records in both events.

"I took an extra half hour to warm up because it was so cold, and pumped my arms high during the race," Little said. "The crowd really got me going down the stretch. I felt good from the start, but was a little disappointed that I didn't have anyone to chase."

Five records were set in Saturday's competition. Tananyalyn Stanley set a new Drake Relays record in the 100-meter high hurdles and led the Louisiana State women to three relay victories.

In addition to the mark by Stanley, Texas A & M's Andre Cason set a new record in the 100-meter dash with a time of 10.10 seconds, bettering the mark of 10.11 by Calvin Smith of Alabama in 1983.

field line in the sixth.

Shane Gooden (2-2) got the loss after giving up two bases-loaded walks in the eighth inning. Saluki starter George Joseph threw seven innings, allowing only four hits. Joseph was responsible for the two Shocker runs.

Jim Newlin (2-0) was the winning pitcher after coming in for Tyler Green in the seventh.

This was Wichita State's first extra-inning game of the season. The Salukis are 3-2 in extra-innings.

In the second game, the Shockers picked up right where they left off. Lansing drilled a 2-run home run in the first that cleared the 365-foot mark in left field.

The Salukis tied the score at two in the second. Brad Hollenkamp came home on a throwing error and Kirkpatrick scored on a Davis single to center.

But the Shockers opened things up in the fourth. Winslow and Jim Audley both had doubles to spark a 4-run rally to put Wichita State up 6-2.

SIU-C chipped away at Wichita's advantage in the fifth. Wrona and Doug Shields, who each singled, scored on Hollenkamp's single and Endebeck's fielder's choice respectively.

SIU-C threatened in the sixth with the bases loaded and one out, but could not score.

Kent Wallace (0-2) picked up the loss for the Salukis. Greg Brummett (11-2) was the winner.

and relay wins by doing the same.

Donnell Williams sped to victory in the 100-meters in a time of 10.74. Williams along with Erick Pegues, Guy Sikora and Garret Hines outdistanced the field in the 4 x 100 relay to add another Saluki win in 41.22.

Williams and Pegues again teamed up and with the help of John Stinson and Kevin Steele, SIU-C won the 400 relay.

"It was a good battle with Eastern," Cornell said. "But Donnell broke it away for us.

he had a good day all around."

In the field events both Philipou and Leonard Vance performed well for the Salukis.

Philipou outjumped the competition on her way to victories in the long jump (19 feet 9 inches) and the triple jump (40-2). Both distances were season bests. Philipou had to get past teammate Carmen Robbins on her last jump to get first, Robbins leapt 19-2 to take second.

Vance fell short of first place in the triple jump, finishing second in a season best effort of 50-9. Vance's ankle, which had been bothering him, caused no problems, he said.

Other Saluki wins came from Andy Pettigrew (5,000-meters), Lisa Judisack (10,000-meters), Pegues (400-meters) and Doug Reed (high jump).

Both DeNoon and Cornell said that the home meet went as well as they expected.

"It's nice for the kids to be at home," DeNoon said. "Everyone came out to run this week."

home runs with 11, hit her homer in the second inning of the nightcap, and Taylor swiped two bases in the opener and one more in the second to achieve her mark.

The Salukis swept both games against Drake by scores of 4-1 and 7-1. Taylor went 2-3 in the opener while SIU-C had seven hits and scored three runs on three sacrifice flies.

Mary Jo Firnbach and scored on Angie LeMonnier's sacrifice fly.

In Cedar Falls, Iowa Saturday the first game went to Northern Iowa by a score of 2-1 and the nightcap went to the Salukis by a score of 4-3.

Pitcher Jennifer Brown (5-4) got the only win Saturday, allowing eight hits. Venorsky and Johansen each had a pair of hits for the Salukis.

The excitement came in the seventh inning when Northern Iowa's chance to win was foiled by Brown. The Panthers scored two runs early and were able to put the tying run on second and the winning run on first. But Brown ended the Panthers' chances by snagging a ground ball.

Lisa Robinson, Traci Furlow and Jennifer Brown were the Salukis winning pitchers.

Gibbs had the first two sacrifices in the first inning and freshman Cheryl Venorsky had the other in the third inning.

The winning pitchers for the Salukis were sophomore Lisa Robinson (6-5) in the first game and sophomore Traci Furlow (6-5) in the second.

Gibbs' homer in the first inning of the nightcap put the Salukis up 1-0 but the second inning proved to be the cap for the win. Kim Johansen singled and was then pushed across by Billie Ramsey's triple. Ramsey Shannon Taylor tied SIU-C's stolen base record and Shelly Gibbs broke the home run mark.

In the first game Furlow took the loss and Taylor had three hits.

The Salukis will be at Southeast Missouri Wednesday for a make-up doubleheader.

loss," Auld said. "Two losses in each match came on forfeits, so we really did well."

The two wins gave the Salukis a chance to play Southwest Missouri State for fifth-place honors.

Versus Southwest the women suffered defeat at the tone of 5-2. Jeffrey and Burgess were able to win their singles matches, but it wasn't enough to capture victory.

Though the Salukis didn't win any team honors at Illinois State, some individuals did receive recognition.

Seniors Cherebetiu and Coch were named all-conference at No. 2 and No. 6 singles, respectively. Also the combination of Coch and Burgess did well enough this season to be named to the doubles all-conference team.

Cherebetiu and Burgess went out in winning fashion for the Salukis. Cherebetiu won three of her four matches at conference and Burgess' four wins this weekend bring her career to a close with a winning streak of 10 victories.

"It's nice to see Dana and Julie go out winning," Auld said. "They have been great for us. We're going to miss them next year."

"We wanted to win, but I got more of a sense of accomplishment from the way they banded together as a team. I couldn't ask for more."

The Salukis finished their winning season with an overall record of 22-8.

Men take 7 firsts

The second annual Saluki Invitational had all the makings of a first-rate collegiate track meet — many teams, exceptional athletes, and a couple of exhausted coordinators.

"I was too busy getting people to where they were supposed to be to really see much of the running," women's coach Don DeNoon said. "I'm not just talking about my athletes, but the other teams and the officials too."

"My biggest concern at first was if the weather was going to ruin things," men's coach Bill Cornell said. "I was always running around coordinating something, I couldn't really relax and watch."

The sky was cloudy early in the day, but the sun came out and was especially bright on the Saluki men and women.

The men notched seven first-place finishes while the women kept with the pace with six first-place showings.

Among the women's contributions was Rosanne Vincent's 2:07.70 in the 800-meters. Although the time was good for only a second-place finish, Vincent set a new school record.

Starting Friday the men began SIU-C's winning trend. Jocelyn Langevin set a personal best of 7,148 points on his way to a first-place finish. Larry Holloway and John Bookout also had personal bests as they followed Langevin at second and third place.

"It was the best meet of the year for all three of us," Langevin said. "I've ironed out my tensions, and I think I'm ready for conference. I hope to have my best day there."

"To beat me, someone else is going to have to have his best day too."

On the women's side the Salukis were led by sprinters Kathy Raske and Traci Davis.

Raske, whose 100-meter hurdle NCAA qualifying time of 13.47 seconds last week is not official because of the wind factor, put the doubt out of her mind with a NCAA qualifying time of 13.57 in her first-place effort.

Davis flew to a victory in the 100-meters in a time of 12.14.

Davis and Raske teamed up with Christiana Philippou and Michelle Williams to win the 4 x 100 relay in a conference best time of 46.20 seconds.

"We had great baton exchanges," Raske said. "That made things go smoothly. In my race, I didn't feel too loose in the preliminary, but in the final I felt great. The competition will be tougher at conference and nationals."

The men answered the women's 100-meter individual

Wichita State takes three from SIU-C

By Troy Taylor

Wichita State moved into first place in the Missouri Valley Sunday as the Shockers swept the Salukis at Abe Martin Sunday 5-2 and 6-4.

The two losses overshadowed a four-hitter by Saluki pitcher Sean Bergman (5-4) in Saturday's second game, which SIU-C won 4-1. The Shockers, now 47-9 overall, 9-5 in the MVC, took Saturday's first game 12-4.

The Salukis are now 22-26 overall, 5-11 in league play.

Bergman kept the heart of the Shockers' lineup at bay for most of the contest. Two of Bergman's four strikeouts came against the No. 3 and No. 5 batters in the Wichita order.

Only once did that part of the Shockers' offense touch Bergman. No. 3 batter Mike Lansing led off the fourth inning with a home run to center field.

Bergman did give up a double each to Lansing and Eric Wedge, but the Shockers did not take advantage. For the most part, Bergman forced the Wichita State batters to hit it on the ground. Of the game's 21 outs, 12 were the result of fielded ground balls.

The fourth inning turned out to be the clincher for SIU-C at the plate. Rick Damico, who took first on a throwing error, and Kurt Endebrook, who bunted himself on, both scored. The latter came home on a bases-loaded single to left by Tim Davis.

In Saturday's first game, the Shockers' Pat Cedeno (9-2) scattered 10 Saluki hits and struckout five for the Shockers' win. Mike McDonald had two home runs while Lansing and Bryant Winslow had one each.

On Sunday, a bases-loaded double to the gap in right center by McDonald scored three Wichita State runs in the 10th for the Shockers' win in the first game.

That victory, coupled with an extra-inning loss by Indiana State against Bradley, put Wichita State on top of the Missouri Valley standings.

The Salukis led 2-0 through seven innings as Mike Kirkpatrick scored both runs. The first came in the second on a bases-loaded walk to Dave Wrona. The second was on a Wrona single down the right

Two softball records broken; Salukis win 3 league games

The Saluki softball team, now 21-16 overall, earned three wins in a pair of doubleheaders over the weekend to advance their Gateway Conference record to 8-6, moving closer to the conference tournament.

The Salukis swept two from Drake Friday and split a doubleheader against Northern Iowa Saturday. Friday's games against Drake in Des Moines were record-setting games for junior second baseman Shelly Gibbs and sophomore left fielder Shannon Taylor.

Gibbs set the SIU-C home run record in the nightcap by hitting her fifth homer of the season. Taylor set her mark by stealing her ninth base to tie the SIU-C stolen base record.

Injuries force women's tennis team to settle for 5th in conference finals

By Paul Pabst

Shorthanded but strong willed could be the theme of the women's tennis teams recent attempt to win the Gateway Conference championship.

The squad entered the three day competition without the services of Beth Boardman and Maria Coch. Boardman was sidelined with torn ligaments in her foot and Coch sat out with tendinitis in her ankle.

"We knew it would be tough without Beth and Maria," coach Judy Auld said. "We just put our minds on the job ahead and tried to forget about the injuries."

The injury factor showed up in the Salukis first game against Indiana State. The squad came up on the short end of a 4-5 decision. Two losses coming because of the missing Coch and Boardman.

"We played well against Indiana State," Auld said. "The match took forever because of so many three-set matches. It was close, it could have gone either way."

The Salukis rebounded well after their initial loss. Friday's competition saw the squad take matches from both Bradley and Eastern Illinois.

The 5-3 win over Eastern saw Dana Cherebetin, Missy Jeffrey, Michele Toye, and Julie Burgess win their singles matches.

Against Bradley the same foursome again notched singles wins for the Salukis to lead the way to a 6-3 decision.

"I was pleased the way the girls rebounded after the
